What kind of cheese does domino's use on their pizzas

Domino's launched its vegan-friendly pizza range in all 1,200 UK stores on 7th September 2020. The range includes vegan garlic and herb dip! This successful launch was followed by the debut of a new vegan chicken pizza and vegan chicken dippers side for Veganuary in January 2021. This Domino's vegan pizza from Domino's in the UK. Is Domino's vegan pizza good? Domino's vegan pizza is really good - almost as good as the vegetarian version. The only real difference between them is the texture of the cheese, which is a little sticky rather than chewy as dairy cheese would be. Overall, Domino's vegan pizzas taste great. My vegan Domino's pizza was delicious! Domino's vegan cheese Of course, vegans who used to eat cow cheese will be familiar with the differences between dairy cheese and vegan cheese alternatives. So, you'd never really expect to find chewy, stringy mozzarella on a vegan pizza anyway. The cheese that Domino's UK uses is its own brand, rather than the 'Sheese' that Papa John's uses or the 'Violife' that Pizza Hut uses. That said, the cheese tastes pretty darn good for vegan cheese. It sticks to the roof of your mouth a little, but it doesn't have so much of that vegan cheese smell that many people find offputting. Whether you like vegan cheese alternatives or not, you should give this a go. Domino's vegan pizza base Domino's vegan pizzas, as those contain milk. Luckily, the vegan bases taste exactly the same. They both have that lovely salty, sugary coating which makes Domino's pizzas so addictive. Those who prefer a thinner pizza base will have to wait a while as currently, only the classic crust bases are available to order in the vegan range. Domino's vegan pizza toppings The vegetable toppings on Domino's vegan pizzas are delicious. All the ingredients are really fresh and tasty. Vegans who have never tried Domino's pizza or can't remember when they last did may be surprised by the tomatoes. These are really chunky and juicy, quite different to what you might expect on most other brands of pizza, but really yummy. If you're a fan of fake meat, I think you'll love the chicken-style pieces on the Domino's vegan chicken pizza. They taste quite authentic! Is Domino's vegan garlic dip from Domino's is absolutely fantastic and tastes just like the original version! It looks just the same and has a deliciously creamy, garlicky taste. You'll want to dip your whole pizza slice in it, not just the crusts. Domino's garlic dip has been referred to by some as 'crack dip', as it's just so moreish. And even without casein (the dairy protein which releases casomorphins which trigger dopamine production in your brain), this dip is so addictive that you might want to stock up. Suggested read: Hellmann's vegan mayo review A vegan pizza for a good while, I didn't want my Domino's cravings to cloud this review and to overstate how good the new vegan pizzas are. So, I asked my (non-vegan) Domino's delivery driver if he'd tried the vegan pizzas yet. My Domino's driver said that he had indeed tried the vegan pizzas, and was pleasantly surprised by how tasty they were! He said that there wasn't much difference at all between the taste of the vegan pizza and the non-vegan one. So, it's thumbs up from the expert! What can vegans eat at Domino's?
